

Hi, I'm Olivia. I'm from Washington DC. Right ____ (now / know), I live in London. And my question is, what is a ____ (humor / rumor) that you heard?

Well, I'm going to ____ (share / shore) with you guys right now. So, I work ____ (in / on) a retail store. I am not in any sort ____ (at / of) management or ____ (leadership / leader) position, but I'm friends with a lot of the ____ (managers / manage) who are. And one of my friends ____ (who / how) is one of the managers ____ (whisker / whispered) to me three months ago, "Hey, I know that this ____ (begger / bigger) manager that people don't really like is ____ (quiet / quitting)." But I wasn't ____ (allowed / allow) to say anything. So, she told me that she was quitting. I had to ____ (hear / hide) it. And a lot of my coworkers weren't ____ (happily / happy) with this manager. So, a couple people actually came forward and made ____ (on / an) official complaint about this ____ (manager / manage) and tried to go to HR. And of course, the big ____ (boss / bosses) didn't do anything about it because ____ (them / they) knew that this manager was ____ (quietly / quitting).

And I was the only one of my rank that ____ (know / knew) that this manager was quitting. And then they were getting ____ (always / all) upset that the big bosses weren't ____ (doing / done) anything, and then I had to try and calm people ____ (up / down). But I guess, I don't ____ (known / know) if it's a rumor if it's ____ (true / truely). I guess it kind of is if it gets spread ____ (over / around). But yeah, I knew for about three ____ (month / months) that one of my bosses that people didn't ____ (reality / really) like was quitting.